HEALING THE HEART OF TRAUMA WITH EMDR AND EGO STATE THERAPY

This workshop will present the cutting edge integration of EMDR and Ego State Therapy in the treatment of highly traumatized clients. A major focus will be the exploration and negotiation of the extensive preparation phase that is often required to build the therapeutic relationship prior to the actual trauma processing and desensitization phase.

Participants will be taught how to use EMDR treatment to help traumatized clients develop empathy for themselves, form appropriate internal and external boundaries, and acquire skills to promote healthy affect regulation. Having established these prerequisites, participants will learn how to use the EMDR processing and desensitization phase with trauma and its accompanying dissociative symptoms that some clients experience.

A critical aspect of this work is actively utilizing and understanding Ego State Therapy which is the use of individual, group and family therapy techniques for the resolution of conflicts between the inner parts of the self. This workshop will provide clear understanding of the theory as well as technical innovation and practical strategies and interventions for incorporating Ego State Therapy model with the EMDR Adaptive Information Processing model. The integration of these models allow both the therapist and the client to have a position of empathy and true understanding of the legacies of trauma, loss and attachment issues so that clients can resolve their critical issues and are able to develop and utilize a new blueprint for their lives.

This dynamic workshop will include lecture, experiential practice and case presentation.

WORKSHOP OBJECTIVES

- Understand the fundamentals of Ego State Theory and practice
- Integrate EMDR and Ego State Therapy in the treatment of trauma
- Evaluate the phased preparation work that precedes application of the EMDR protocol with challenging clients
- Develop specific stabilization strategies to help clients manage and reduce dissociative symptoms
- Acquire advanced techniques and interweaves that promote resolution with the EMDR AIP model
