Patients exhibiting chronic dissociative symptoms are among the most complicated patients to be treated in psychotherapy. Their treatment tends to be a multi-faceted approach of which EMDR is only one part, albeit, a very important component.

The objective of this course is to assist the treating clinician in identifying the chronic dissociative patient, conceptualizing and implementing an effective treatment plan for the patient. This will include integrating the traditional three-stage model (stabilization, trauma work and integration) of working with patients with dissociative symptoms using the EMDR Eight Phase Treatment Model. Emphasis will be placed on stabilization and pacing the trauma work with individual patients.

The workshop format will include lecture and presentation of clinical case material. Participants are encouraged to bring clinical cases to the workshop for discussion.

WORKSHOP OBJECTIVES

- Assess and identify clients presenting with dissociative symptoms
- Formulate case conceptualization
- Treatment planning to include EMDR based trauma processing
- Integrate the 8 phases of EMDR with traditional treatment for trauma
- Identify when clients with dissociative symptoms are ready for EMDR treatment
- Pace the treatment, shifting between stabilization trauma reprocessing and relational work
- Manage therapeutic complications that arise during treatment
